DR. RAINSFORD CERTIFIES THE EN-DOWMENT'S LARGE PART OF IT.

The Rector of St. George's Contends That Great Church Wealth Gives Freedom of Speech to the Ministers—His Own Church's Experience Bishop Potter Will Be at Trinity To-Day. Trinity Church was filled yesterday at noon when the Rev. Dr. W. S. Raineford went into the pulpit to deliver, as the third day's feature of the bi-centennial ceremonies, an address entitled, "Where Shall We Place Our Strongest Churches!" Crowds were standing in the side aisles and in the chancel itself. All sorts and conditions of men and women were represented. There was a large proportion of young women who were apparently employed in downtown offices. There was a constant tendency of the people in the side aisles to move up to a place where they could get a good look at the rector of St. George's and hear his voice in its full strength, and then get out of the church and return to their secular tasks.

The speaker began by reviewing the relation between Trinity and St. George's, the first of her chapels. He recalled the establishment of St. George's in 1752 as an overflow chapel, the separation of St. George's into an independent friendly parish, and the various times after that when Trinkty had relieved the distress of her weaned offspring. Taking the case of St. George's as a particular example of the beneficences of Trinity Dr. Rainsford said: There are two or three considerations I would beg to impress upon you. First, the centralization of endowment in Trinity Churchthe large wealth under control of that one corporation-has been a good thing for the Church of Christ at large in this city. There are those, I know, who are jealous of Trinity's endowment, and think it a mistake that any one corporation should possess such powers as vast wealth bestows. I totally disagree with them, and I have indicated all my reasons for such disagreement. If it had been possible, among a variety of small churches, to break up and divide this large property, what would there be to show for it to-day!

"There is no doubt whatever, in my own mind, that the result would have been as unfortunate as it has been in my own church—the general frittering away of great powers for good. Of all the endowments given to St. George's Church by Trinity Church, thirty-three lots in all—a property, even fifty years ago, worth well nigh $200,000—nothing remains but one lot on Chembers street. Bit by bit it has been sold and dissibated to pay for removals, to build altar fires, or to make up deficits. Fortunately, by retaining a large part of the property in her own hands. Trinity is able to exercise a power which has influenced, and will influence, I believe, for good the Greater New York."

Dr. Rainsford then dwelt upon the great free-

Dr. Rainsford then dwelt upon the great freedom that is conferred upon a minister by the endowment of his church. A minister, he said, who knows that the material welfare of his church depends upon the generosity of one or two or ten men in his congregation finds it hard to speak God's truth when free speech may alienate the sympathy and approval of these men. Endowment guarantees free speech, and, therefore, a permanent endowment from a greatcentral fund like that of Trinity Corporation is a biessing to the man who would not be hampered by any considerations save those of righteousness. The speaker then passed on to the consideration of what he called the "fatal movement" of the churches uptown toward the homes of the rich. Dr. Rainsford then dwelt upon the great free-eration of what he called the "fatal movement" of the churches uptown toward the homes of the rich.

"Since I came to New York, fifteen years ago," he said, "I have seen the population of the city below Fourteenth street increased by 140, 500 and more; and I have seer nineteen churches move out of that district. Can any man be blind to the fact that it has been, that it is, the policy, naiens rolens, to take the big, spacious, beautiful churches away from the people who most urgently need them. These poor people in the tenements of the lower part of the city cannot pay for the churches they need. They cannot pay for the churches they need. They cannot pay for air for their bables. How, then, shall they build churches? It is the policy to take these churches away from people whose lives are dark, whose backs are weary with burden bearing; away from children who are brought up amid wretchedness and squalor and to give those churches to you and to me and to others who need them not so much. Is it right? Nothing can make it right; nothing can ever justify it; nothing can ever excuse it. As a Christian man, speaking from Trinity pulpit, I thank God that this great church is here in the busiest part of the busiest street in New York."

To-day is the principal day of the bi-centenary celebration. Bishop Potter will be in charge of the exercises. Admission will be by ticket only.

The publication soon after midday of the modifications of the Dingley Tariff bill proposed by the Senate Finance Committee started an adpoints higher than last night. The market for the stock during the forenoon indicated that some speculators had early information, or any way strong suspicions, as to the Senate committee's treatment of the augar schedule. After the summary of the bill was made public the buying of Sugar Refining, which appeared to be largely to cover shorts, became urgent. The revival of speculative activity in Sugar Refining stimulated trading throughout the list. In consequence the majority of stocks closed higher than yesterday. Other considerations that helped to develop a more hopeful sentiment were prospects that the Senate will begin the consideration of its Finance Committee's report in the near future, evidence that there will be no more exports of specie this week, trustworthy reports of an improvement in the condition of the anthracite coal trade, and reassuring advices from Chicago regarding the passage of the Chicago Gas Consolidation bill. The advance in the anthracite coal share was forced a little by the premium demanded for the use of Delaware and Hudson stock. Some of the recent sellers of that stock for short of 1 W cent, to obtain certificates for delivery. Central nearly 2 points higher than yesterday The Granger stocks, Chicago Gas, Reading, Tennessee Coal and Iron, and Western Union scored net advances that averaged more than a point. On the other hand, Manhattan Railway and Missouri Pacific were exceptionally weak, and though they recovered other stocks, sustained fractional net declines. 1 Morris & Es 1st 1.44

4 Most largely interested in them, to depress them with the view of facilitating the covering of which the view of facilitating the covering of shorts in other stocks. Although the volume of trading was nearly twice as large as yesterday, and prices advanced rapidly owing to the previous details the market is extremely narrow and that the demand for stocks comes almost entirely from the short interest. The closing was tirely from the short interest. The closing was strong at about the best prices.

confined within a narrow range, with the tendency downward. The news having an innuence upon the market was generally bearish. Liverpool was lower both for futures and spots, the receipts at the ports were liberal, and the total thus far this week is now considerably larger than in the same time last week; the spot markets in this country were quiet, the weather was favorable, and the recent rise in prices has eliminated the short interest from the market. The most unfavorable factor, however, was the absence of outside support. The weekly dovernment report was considered favorable.

COFFEE.—Rio on the spot was quiet but firm: No. 7, Sc. Sales, 4,000 hags No. 7 to arrive at Sc., and 900 hags Maracabo on private terms. The future trading was as follows:

Protects Against Undisclosed Mortgages.

From N. Y. Tribune, April 15, 1897. "THEY BOUGHT MORTGAGED LAND "The Children's Aid Society has brought fore-closure proceedings for the sale of property situated in Sea Breeze Ave., between West Third and West Fifth Sts.

"It is alleged that the seller never let the pur chasers know that the property was mortgaged, and gave warranty deeds for all the property sold. The purchasers, relying on his representations, did not have the titles searched, and are now likely to lose their holdings. When Morson learned of the mortgage he made a set-tlement with the mortgage, paying $1,200 and getting a clear title. The other owners are poor men, and have no property, except what they bought and the improvements they have made."
